The Problems of Lasting Peace Revisited, edited by Thomas T. Thalken, West Branch: Herbert Hoover Presidential Library Association, 1986. Distributed by Regina Books, P. O. Box 280, Claremont, CA 91711. viii, 196 pp. Notes, appendix, index. $14.95. Some forty years after Herbert Hoover and Hugh Gibson published The Problems of Lasting Peace, the Herbert Hoover Presidential Library brought together a group of scholars, diplomats, and political observers for an international conference on peacemaking. This book reproduces not only the papers presented there but the discussions as well. In part one George H. Nash, Gary Dean Best, and Joan Hoff-Wilson present Hoover's world view and his postwar foreign policy. Then in part two Ambassador Philip C. Habib discusses some problems in the contemporary search for peace and Hugh Sidey reflects on the attitudes toward peace of U.S. presidents since Kennedy.

Race, Class, and Politics: Essays on American Colonial and Revolutionary Society, edited by Gary B. Nash, with a foreword by Richard S. Dunn. Champaign: University of Illinois Press, 1986. xxii, 370 pp. Notes, tables, index. $37.50 cloth; $15.95 paper.
