Contributors

SARAH JANE EIKLEBERRY is a doctoral candidate in sport studies at the University of Iowa. A graduate of College of DuPage, North Central College, and the University of Iowa, her research interests focus on sport and regional identity and on the midwestern collegiate play day during the 1920s through the 1950s.

GWEN KAY is assistant professor of history at the State University of New York at Oswego. A historian of science and medicine and women's history, she is working on a larger project examining science education for women at the college level from 1960 to 2005, using home economics programs as a prism through which to view these changes. National in scope, the project is firmly grounded in the midwestern educational experience.
