HENRY K. LOVE, retired U. S. Army officer; died at Kensington, Maryland, April 27, 1947; born in Iowa in 1863, the son of James Madison Love, a native of Fairfax Courthouse, Virginia, a distant relative of President James Madison, and Mary Thomasson Love, of Louisville, Kentucky, who died at his birth. At the outbreak of the Spanish-American war he enlisted in the Rough Riders regiment as a private, and at the close of the war was a sergeant, the late President Theodore Roosevelt, then the regimental commander, describing him as "so straight that he bent over backwards;" also was a soldier in the Philippine insurrection and in World War I, and advanced to the rank of major; thus a veteran of three wars, elderly and beyond retirement age, after the attack at Pearl Harbor, sought some sort of service in connection with the war effort but was rejected, much to his disappointment after visiting the army, the navy and Red Cross headquarters. Major Love's sole survivor is his daughter, Mrs Bonnie Love Von Steiner-Goltl, of Kensington, with whom he resided; his wife, Mrs. Josephine Chase Love, and son, Madison Chase, having died several years ago.
