Contributors

PATRICIA L. BRYAN, professor of law at the University of North Carolina, is the coauthor of Midnight Assassin: A Murder in America's Heartland (University of Iowa Press, 2007), about the Iowa murder case in 1900 that inspired Susan Glaspell's story "A Jury of Her Peers." Bryan is also the coeditor of a new collection of stories by Glaspell: Her America: "A Jury of Her Peers" and Other Stories (University of Iowa Press, 2010), which includes many previously inaccessible works by Glaspell.

ROBERT SCHOONE-JONGEN teaches in the history department at Calvin College in Grand Rapids, Michigan. He holds a doctorate in nineteenth-century American social history from the University of Delaware. His dissertation, "A Time to Gather, A Time to Scatter: Dutch-American Settlement in Minnesota, 1885–1910," is a comparative history of two Dutch Calvinist farming communities. His current research focuses on Dutch settlement in northern New Jersey after 1850.

LESLIE A. SCHWALM is professor of history; gender, women's, and sexuality studies; and African American studies at the University of Iowa. Her scholarship on gender, race, and the Civil War era has included A Hard Fight for We: Women's Transition from Slavery to Freedom in South Carolina (1997) and Emancipation's Diaspora: Race and Reconstruction in the Upper Midwest (2009).
