Contributors

JOANNE ABEL GOLDMAN is associate professor of history at the University of Northern Iowa. Her research interests are in the history of science and technology. Since publishing her book, Building New York's Sewers (1997), she has published several articles (including two in the Annals of Iowa) on the history of the Ames Laboratory, which led to her interest in atomic energy education. Concurrently, she has been working on the rise and fall of the domestic rare earth industry. He is grateful to the State Historical Society of Iowa for the research grant that supported this project.

DEREK ODEN is associate professor of history at Del Mar College in Corpus Christi, Texas. He earned a Ph.D. in agricultural history and rural studies from Iowa State University in 2006. His research interests include food history and agricultural studies. He is working on a book-length study of the effort to reduce farm accidents in the Midwest. He is grateful to the State Historical Society of Iowa for the research grant that supported this project.
