Never mind tornadoes, helicopters, & tomato paste.

Never mind that in the Army “Warrant Officer” means you drive a helicopter.

In the Navy it means something completely different.
(You wouldn’t know this. You shouldn’t.)

To yoke, incongruously, desperate things together has a long & varied, storied, buried history.

It has, my little monkey, a pedigree.

A symphony of men, turkey leg bits clinging to crispy beards, adorned in lace & fringed (& cringed) brocade, penning verses to be understood. They say. & curtsy.

& the ugliness of the ampersand implies an ugliness
in the user: of this I am guilty.

I also plead no contest to finding you more indispensable than the serial comma.

Here, one point seven thousand miles away, it can be said.
(And the passive construction frees me from agency.)

Here, 1700 leagues from The Zoo. Here, 1700 times point six two kilometers
away from the lake, the effect of which makes snowmen quiver,

Here lies your daddy: once- (& twice- & thrice-) besotted, poorly read or misread,

You occupy with curls, with black eyes, with Spanish, with your newfound skill of spelling

(O! and strike some o' that up there, yes? Is trita et obvia, no?)

The day you came to town was perilous & I was gaunt.

The woman you call "mommy" was a dusky traffic flare.

I. Well, I slept after. I slept, waited for you to become.

2000 miles is very far through the snow.

Pundits blog about the short form, about economies of scale. Daylight no longer appeals.

& my friend said to me, he sd, “I’m worried about the 55,000 hausfraus who will get this in their in-box tomorrow & will they hate me”

which like all good stories trails off & resists the urge to cross-reference & resists the temptation to boil it all down to a syrup of weather reports or catty retorts for every woman who has wronged you.

It's always about you. Web cam flickers. Room dims.

Pipers traverse the sand dunes above a lake; buggies roam.

Watch out, traveler.
