

ELIZABETH METZGER

Voice Box in the Surgical Field

An automatic train car returns around existence with the black-blow cargo of no apparent why.

At home a rat collapses beneath a door.

I knock, circled by the chance
you will expire.

Body that appears only by your body's disappearance—

soon your rib must rotate, like a turnstile,
to let me in.