

ERINA HARRIS

THE SHADOW

I love them so much I could eat them.
They need me. I amuse them when

I make them sing that bloody song
about my horn, pointy and worn strapped to my corner I am but I am not her master, it, for her I cannot repeat, perfect to her as one, not quite right, gone

off.