

GOLD MARKINGS

The days are longer with less light, fewer field hands
and the wild bitters
of early apples,
vines in the bending distance
of freehand meadows,
a heron in the weeds and still the tone we hold is silk like the black sixth of the Gregorian chants you play to keep the night, night.