

UNGLAMOROUS

Bluer moths in the borrowed land, late summer the dark borders what territory you keep, the dreamy duskywings and silver darklings who clasp to milkweed as though abundance were anywhere but here.
What we've been is hard to exact, orange the skipper in the last of the timothy,
older the marriage between oak and its earthliness.