

The Child

She is bending over her child. She can't leave her. The child is laid out in state on a table. She wants to take one more photograph of the child, probably the last. In life the child would never sit still for a photograph. She says to herself, "I'm going to get the camera," as if saying to the child, "Don't move."