

PARTICULATE MATTER

A man in a field holds a folding chair.
A deer sleeps in the grass, statuesque.
The man with the chair is my lover.

A father's father stands to his left.
His missing teeth are parallel universes.
At any moment they might collide and nobody understands the nature of death.