

THE PUBLIC ROOM

The people are here.
They don't speak.
Their ears drowse.

The people look and do
as I do
but across the room.

Between us
the weight of sun
focuses the air.

The people
stabilize
the distance.

The people and I
sit and rise
on the edge of each other.

No move to gather.