

What You See · William Stafford

You see The Great at The Kennedy Center lifting a purple curtain to stride forth on a wide stage. You see The Other Great applauding. You see faces moved by the sight, and you see The Nation watching, worshiping.

You are numbed by successive glimpses, Leaders, Performers, Critics, congratulating each other: They know excellence when They see it.
And around it all, you hear this other pulsing:
you hear under the stage the silent earth and overhead a burst of the great silence.