

BOYD W. BENSON

Performance

The wind lulls itself
over the hills,

over the centuries
of its becoming,

into a small box.

A candle shines.

Also, the yellow eye
of a black rooster,

and the small sunrise
he juggles on his beak.