

Orpheus at Whatipu

The entrance signals where wavelengths break at the outskirts of motion, the entrance sings rising, falling, rising . . . sounding into sequence.

Sometimes it blinds the horizon to be looking back.

Red on black

two variable oystercatchers circle this shipwrecked scene, the sun detonated; constellations torching the surface wake.