Endless night

The moon revolves past the western window the canopied bed deepens Lamp darkens, incense turns to ash
I am smothered in this cold coverlet A soul flies where?
A flute on a gust of wind and speaking of broken hearts who pounds the washing stone?