Dear Sandra McPherson,

I appreciate deeply your letter of February 26th which has just now been forwarded by the University of Pittsburgh Press.

It is no exaggeration to say it has really warmed the cockles of my heart to find I've been able to communicate to you a little of the unfailing excitement I've always felt over being alive in this incredible universe. As I've often exclaimed to my younger brother, "I'm glad I didn't miss it!"

If your Young Poets' Anthology should ever develop and you should still want me included, I'd be glad. (After all, the final test of poetry is "Does it wear?")

Sincerely yours,

Abbie Huston Evans

P.S.

You know perhaps that I'm 90??
