

Two Poems · Lola Haskins

COOKERY: TO TRUSS SMALL BIRDS

Thread wheatears, ruffs, or quail on a long skewer, three or four together.
Pass the skewer through the wingtip,
through the body of each bird and out to the next. Secure with string.

See the little birds on their burning branch.
Their song sizzles from their beaks.
Their wings are tied.
How they would fly otherwise, on this ecstatic wind!

FASHION: HOW TO WEAR THE VEIL

With black jet stars artfully set above a bare chin.
This is the way of the flirt.

With the veil caught behind to hang unhampered to the wearer's waist.
This is the way of the free American,
of the summer girl.

And then there is the nun,
who goes differently veiled, morning and afternoon.

This is the way of the truly passionate.
The way of the woman who stands in the wind at the needle's shiny point, her face covered, who does not look down.