

WHAT HAPPENS

if you can't imagine yourself anywhere—what then?

For example: here—who is going to polish the candlesticks? Who is going to light the beeswax candles when darkness begins to enter these woods and all you can think of is how light leaves the prairie:

darkness doesn't come in. Prairie, keep me going a little longer.