

A FLOWER

In the merciless wind and rain
the flower at long last lay flat.

After a night-long fever
I rise with a puffy face and push open the window.

We must live!

Rise up, flower!
You have to feed your kids
and send them off to school.