

Sunrise

Vicki L. Hesli

Department of Political Science

University of Iowa, Iowa City, IA USA

Silver rays of early sunshine reflecting off fully ripe golden corn.
Slight, light fog lying over unkempt creek beds.
Pale blue sky, on the horizon almost white blue, and not a single cloud.
With the clearest, crispest air, one can see for miles over rolling fields.

Orange maples and circular grain bins mark homesteads
With barbed wire fence lines as relics of roaming livestock:
A silent symphony played on God's rich earth,
Celebrating Iowa's yearly harvest.