WHITMAN ELECTRONIC ARCHIVE

Kenneth M. Price (College of William & Mary) and Ed Folsom (University of Iowa) are co-directing a new electronic scholarship project called The Walt Whitman Hypertext Archive, headquartered at the College of William & Mary and affiliated with the Institute for Advanced Technology in the Humanities at the University of Virginia. The Whitman Hypertext Archive is a multiyear undertaking and has as its goal the gathering and linking of as many Whitman materials as possible. All materials—including editions of Leaves of Grass, photographs of Whitman, Whitman manuscripts, and reviews of Whitman's work—will be openly available on the World Wide Web. The Web site is now under construction and can be accessed at this address:

<http://jefferson.village.Virginia.EDU/whitman/>

Currently available are partial facsimiles of some early editions of Leaves of Grass, bibliographies, a gallery of Whitman photographs, and early reviews of Whitman's work. Folsom and Price are also co-editing a CD-ROM of Whitman's work as part of the Major Authors on CD-ROM series for Primary Source Media. The Whitman CD-ROM will contain, among other materials, the complete New York University Press Collected Writings of Walt Whitman in fully searchable format. It is scheduled for release in 1997.

WHITMAN JOURNALISM

The first volume of a projected five-volume collection of Whitman's journalism is scheduled for publication in the summer of 1997 by Peter Lang Publishing. Volume I covers the years 1834-1846 and is edited by Herbert Bergman of Michigan State University, with Douglas A. Noverr and Edward J. Recchia as associate editors. This volume reprints 589 Whitman editorials, articles, essays, and other prose matter, along with poems from twenty journals. The journalism volumes are designed to be part of The Collected Writings of Walt Whitman series. The journalism volumes will include substantial annotation, textual tables, and comprehensive indexes.
